NAVAL SURGEON SCARED.

Charges Ordered Off, He Fears Being Stranded on Midway Islands.

Asst. Surg. Myron C. Bacon, on duty with the marine detachment at the Midway Islands got the scare of his life the other day.

His duty is to look after the physical welfare of the marines—one officer and seventeen privates—on the island. The main duty of the marine detachment is to guard the cable station, which is about the only thing on the island. Several days ago the Marine Corps sent an order to the commanding officer of the marines ordering their withdrawal.

Surg. Baker receives his orders from the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the department. He waited patiently for a cablegram announcing that he too had been ordered away with the marines, but none came. Finally his patience gave out, and he sent a message to the Navy Department asking if he were going to be left alone on the island without any work, and only several cable operators for companions. Secretary Metcalf yesterday sent instructions to the naval tug Troquod, which is en route from Honolulu for Midway, to delay its departure from the islands one day in order to take the surgeon off.

De Chaulnes, Who Married Miss Shonts, to Go Into Business.

Frenchman Will Be First Noble Husband of Wealthy American Girl to Go to Work.

New York, March 18.—The Duke de Chaulnes, who sailed to-day for Europe on the White Star liner Teutonic with his bride, the daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, declared just before the vessel departed that he would return here in September to go into business. He did not seem at all surprised when he was informed that if he did so he would be the first noble husband of a wealthy American girl to try to earn his own living in the United States.

The duke was evidently in deadly earnest about the matter. He said he had made all arrangements to come back and dive into the whirl of Wall street. He would not explain much about the nature of the business, however, because he was troubled about the baggage of the bridal party.

"I shall come back in September," said he, "and I shall see the New York and Parisian representative of the international financial firm which will deal in railroad matters here and abroad. The matter has all been settled and the business will become active when I return."

There was a large crowd to see the duke and the new duchess off when they reached the pier. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Shonts and their daughter Margaret, there were many other friends of the young couple. In the duke's party and sailing with him were the Baron de Cande, a cousin of De Chaulnes; the Baron De La Boulliere, and John W. Hoth.

When the time came for the steamship to leave and the bride to part from her sister and mother, all of them broke down, but Mr. Shonts tried hard to look unconcerned. Those who stayed behind didn't leave the pier till the Teutonic was far out in the stream.

PREACHES BRILLIANT SERMON.

Rev. Father Finnerty Heard in St. Dominic's Church.

The feast of St. Patrick was observed Tuesday morning in St. Dominic's Church by the celebration of high mass, and in a special way the saint was honored last evening at the Lenten devotions in that church, when a panegyric of Ireland's patron and apostle was preached by Rev. Father J. L. Finnerty, O. P., spiritual director of the Holy Name Society of St. Dominic's Church.

Father Finnerty's sermon last evening on "St. Patrick and the loyalty of the Irish people," was a masterful discourse, meriting recognition with any notable panegyrics of that great saint.
